

Put Your Screen On Your Cap

Written by Roger Douglas
05. 05. 2014

Live Lids creates a cap that comes with an LCD screen where the logo or image of a team would traditionally be stitched.

For $75, those who like to switch allegiances among teams (or sports) can purchase this wearable screen.

The advantage is that this hat features a USB port on the underside of the brim where it can be plugged into a computer and uploaded with up to 100 different images. Why limit yourself to sports messages?

The cap comes pre-loaded with 20 images of the customers choosing. It's supposed to be able to hold battery charge for 10 hours.

We guess this “wearable” should come with a health warning: it might be very contentious if your programming brings up the wrong sports logo at the wrong moment on the wrong side of the stadium.

Put Your Screen On Your Cap

Written by Roger Douglas
05. 05. 2014

Watch Live Lids

Go Live Lids