

ADMS Adds Even More Disc-Free Content

Written by Marco Attard
15. 02. 2011

Crestron adds more web-based services to its latest ADMS intermedia delivery system-- after removing the blu-ray player.

New web connectivity includes sites like ESPN, CNN and MSn, joining the likes of Netflix, Hulu, iTunes and Youtube.

The new ADMS also seamlessly integrates with Sony's 400 disc blu-Ray/DVD ES MegaChanger (replacing Crestron's own ADC-200BR). The ADMS connects with the MegaChanger over network, allowing users to browse their disc library over any Crestron touch panel, remote or iDevice/Android control app.

Existing ADMS owners can also upgrade their system for Sony MegaChanger support by clicking the "update available" message on their ADMS display.

Go Crestron ADMS Delivers More Content