

Wireless and Motion-sensing wizard CyWee showed buyers the AirShuttle, the first (and only) MFi-certified accessory that enables real-time audio and video transmission from an iPod, iPhone, or iPad. Without the use of cables, users can now share mobile content on-the-go and at home via TV.

International Sales Manager Thomas Hartung [in photo] demonstrated the product at CeBIT inside the ICP Pavilion.

CyWee is a privately-held company funded by SB China Venture Capital and Taiwan's Industrial Technology Research Institute (ITRI). Based on research at ITRI that started in 2003, CyWee holds 52 key patents associated with motion-sensing. CyWee's partners include HP, Fujitsu, Acer, Marvell, China Unicom, and China Telecom.
