Another contender is set to join the 85-inch Ultra HD (or 4K resolution) TV fray-- Samsung announces it will show off such a TV on January 2013 at CES.

The company gives precious few details of the TV, which it claims will be "the world's largest commercialised UHD LED TV," other than "innovative dimming technology" and "powerful and dynamic range of sounds."

Samsung is a bit late at joining the 4k/Ultra HD category-- Sony, Toshiba and LG already announced similar TVs back at IFA 2012.

At CES 2013 Samsung will also show off the 2013 Smart LED TV range (7500 and 8000 series), 55-inch Super OLED TV and a camera accessory for Smart TVs lacking a built-in peeper.
