Customers can reach the PlayStation Now cloud-based game streaming service without need for a Sony console-- a "select" number of 2014 and 2015 Samsung Smart TVs now have access to the service.

The subscription-based service also requires the addition of a Dualshock 4 controller as an input device. It is also available on Sony consoles and a number of Sony Bravia TVs.

Announced back in CES 2014, PlayStation Now is currently available in N. America, although Sony is also holding open beta testing in the UK. This means the service should eventually launch in European territories sometime in the (near?) future.
