AV-iQ, the provider of a comprehensive AV product database complete with search engine, joins forces with the HDBaseT Alliance to bring products featuring the HDBaseT standard in the AViQ platform.

Users of the AV-iQ catalog can search or filter for specific features, and thus locate products featuring the HDBaseT standard. Thus, the partnership provides AV professionals with accurate, real-time product information, including HDBaseT standard indication in an online catalogue with powerful search, comparison and project list tools.

“Our audience of professional end users need the most detailed information possible when searching our database for the products they need for their installation projects. Having a partnership where we can keep the HDBaseT products listed and updated is critical to that endeavor,” AV-iQ says, “We’re happy to be able to provide this standard in AV-iQ for our end-users, as well as provide the HDBaseT members an additional platform to showcase their products.”
