The co-founder of Skype and Rdio, Janus Friis, reveals his next project-- Vdio (pronounced "Vee-dee-o"), a Netflix rival to launch sometime in the near future (probably 2012) in the UK.

Very little is known about the service-- it will let users watch TV shows and movies, is currently in closed beta and the company thinks "people will love using Vdio."

No pricing details are available, either. Currently all the website offers is cycling shots from films and TV shows.

We will have more details as soon as they're available.
