

Savant Integrates LightTouch

Written by Marco Attard
04. 09. 2012

Savant Systems transforms the LiteTouch product portfolio into Savant Lighting Control, a series installers can integrate within the Savant automation ecosystem or use as a standalone lighting control system.

Best known for AV control systems based on trendy Apple products, Savant bought LiteTouch from Nortek back in February 2012.

LiteTouch users can activate lights via Savant keypads as well as the iOS and Mac apps from the company, including TrueControl and Truelmage Control.

In addition installers can set up Savant Lighting Control products as part of a standalone lighting solution, with the same interoperability LiteTouch offered to 3rd party control vendors. Savant's backwards compatible hardware and software designs allows for support and system upgrade of all LiteTouch systems already installed in the field.

The company will also continue supporting 3rd party lighting control systems through the Partners in Excellence Program.

Savant Integrates LightTouch

Written by Marco Attard
04. 09. 2012

Savant Lighting Control will be available from Q3 2012 through both Savant and LiteTouch dealer networks.

Go Savant Lighting Control